To whom it may concern,

As part of our request to remove certain specializations within the Masters of Family and Consumer Sciences program, approval is required by the department or program curriculum committee.

The Masters of Family and Consumer Sciences program is administered by the Dean's Office of the College of Human Sciences. As such, there is no department or program curriculum committee for MFCS. Documentation in support of our request is included from the College of Human Sciences Curriculum Committee and the DOGE from the applicable departments.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Brenda Lohman". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "B" and a long, sweeping underline.

Hello Katie,

On Tuesday, April 9, 2019, the College of Human Sciences Curriculum Committee voted unanimously 5-0 in favor to remove the following specializations from the Family and Consumer Sciences master's program as listed through the Graduate College:

Apparel Merchandising and Design (M.F.S.)
Comprehensive (M.F.S.)
Hospitality Management (M.F.S.)
Nutritional Sciences (M.F.S.)

The minutes of our meeting will also confirm this action.

Thank you for visiting with the committee and helping us clean up our program offerings.

Jonathan Fox
Chair, College of Human Sciences Curriculum Committee

I think you are correct. I don't know the last time we had a student in that program.

Dr. Rowling,

Hello! I provide support to the Family and Consumer Sciences online graduate programs in CHS and am reviewing the different ways where students may get information about our programs.

On the Family and Consumer Sciences page housed within the Graduate College website, <https://www.grad-college.iastate.edu/academics/programs/apresults.php?id=47>, it lists the following as areas of specialization.

Area(s) of Specialization (will appear on all ISU transcripts after graduation): Hospitality Management (M.F.S.); Apparel Merchandising and Design (M.F.S.); Youth Development (M.F.S.); Gerontology (M.F.S.); Family Financial Planning (M.F.S.); Dietetics (M.F.S.); Comprehensive (M.F.S.); Nutritional Sciences (M.F.S.); Human Development and Family Studies (M.F.S.); Family and Consumer Sciences Education (M.F.S.);

In my conversations with Brenda Lohman and looking online, it does not appear FS HN still offers a Master of Family and Consumer Sciences. Are we ok to remove this listed as "Specializations" from the Grad College page?

Thank you!

Hello Katie: Yes, that is fine because we have eliminated those offerings a while back.
